

Training Beyond High School

Some jobs require formal training beyond high school, but not a college degree. For example, licensed practical nurses usually have a certificate of training from a technical or community college.

This is called a 'post-secondary' vocational award. These are not college degrees, but certificate or diploma programs that provide essential skills and training specific to the job.

To find out those Connecticut colleges that offer diploma programs, please go to www.cttraining.info and select the 'Advanced Search' feature.

Staff in the CTWORKS Career Centers are familiar with training programs that are available in your area. They will be glad to talk to you about training opportunities to meet your career goals.

Looking to fast-track your career? Consider an apprenticeship!

It combines on-the-job training, mentoring, and classroom training for a particular job, and you get paid while you learn!

Formal apprenticeships are registered with the U.S. Department of Labor.

For a list of apprenticeship opportunities in Connecticut, search the Connecticut Department of Labor's Office of Apprenticeship Training website at: www.ctapprenticeship.com

Qualities

Employers look for many things in a job candidate. Some basic qualities include:

- punctuality - being on time
- dependability - can you be relied upon?
- competency - can you do the required tasks?
- cooperation - do you work well with others?

Benefits

In addition to a paycheck, the range of benefits offered by certain jobs can be broad. Typically, larger companies offer a more comprehensive benefits package, but don't rule out small companies.

During your job search, seek out employers who offer any of the following benefits:

- stable work hours
- advancement opportunities
- enjoyable and rewarding work environment
- vacation, sick or family leave
- health insurance
- education benefits or tuition reimbursement
- retirement benefits
